This series was developed to foster entrepreneurial thinking in our research programs, clinical environments, educational endeavors, and service components.

Our first Seminar Series speaker will be Mike Holers, MD, a rheumatologist who has translated his basic and clinical research and experiences into commercialized products. Dr. Holers is an excellent dual role model for scientists and clinicians. His current venture, Q32 Bio, which develops therapeutics for severe inflammatory and autoimmune diseases, was launched in 2017. He will talk about his own pathway in innovation and entrepreneurship as a faculty member and rheumatologist at CU Anschutz.

Learn more about Dr. Holer's current venture here.
